

Facebook

The law is that you have to be thirteen years or older to have a facebook. Truth is that there are a lot of kids under the age of thirteen who have facebooks. I'm going to explain why kids shouldn't have facebooks under the age of thirteen.

Kids get bullied on facebook right when they get home from school. Ready to talk to their friends about everything that went on during the day. What they are not ready for is a hurtful post about how no one likes you and you are not popular at school. You wonder why this is happening. You did not do anything to deserve that mean comment. The next morning you are afraid to go to school because kids will laugh at you and make you feel unwelcome. Kids can also fire back at the kids who bully them and they can hurt their feelings.

Parents do not know what can happen on facebook. Kids can see pictures and posts that are not appropriate for their age. They could think it's okay to post pictures and posts that will get them in trouble. They will not understand why because they saw a bunch of other people posted stuff like that and they didn't get in trouble.

In conclusion, that's why I think kids should not have facebooks under age thirteen. I don't have a facebook and I don't want one for a while. I've known people who've been bullied on facebook and I don't want that to happen to me or anyone else.
