

Should we make school longer? by Liam

The government is thinking about making school days longer for kids. There are two sides to the argument.

Some people think making school longer could be good because kids get more work done and be more ready for High school and college. It also helps you get good jobs in the future. The one hour a day adds up and adds two more years of school before college!

School days getting longer could also be a bad thing because more school means kids are going to be tired and not show up as much. Parents will have to get their kids at seven o'clock. Some parents work long hours so it affects parents too. Also kids could get bullied more because there is more time in school.

I think the school day should stay the same because the School days are long enough. The amount of time has been good enough. Kids learn enough to have an average life, a good home and a good amount of money. I personally think we should keep the school days time the same.
